Intro to Wizard Criminology
Property of Briarwolf School For Witches, Wizards, and the Otherwise Magically Inclined.

To be read out loud by Detective Critterson:
I'm sure you've all heard about the recent escape of Vladimir Rimidalv, a notorious vampire responsible for at least fifteen murders. With help from Mr. Glass, we were able to locate and detain Vladimir, but he escaped before arriving at El Mirage Prison.

Everyone present, except for myself, Onyx Glass, and Alex Basset, was part of a list of names on a parchment found on Vladimir's person. There was one person on the list that we could not find. That was Jenifer Porter, Briarwolf's principal. If anyone know of her current whereabouts, please come forward.

So, for your safety, and in the interest of finding Vladimir, you've all been brought here. We have confiscated your wands. You may only use non-magical devices such as a cellular phone or non-enchanted tablet. It should let you do everything you'll need to do while you're here. Please scan the square thing called a QR code at the bottom of this page and click on only your name. Everyone present needs to do this.

Now that everyone's scanned in, why don't we all introduce ourselves? I'll start.

Detective Kit Critterson: You are a Detective for the Central Organization of Prohibited Practices of Sorcery (COPPS) and are the one who apprehended Vladimir. You were also the one personally responsible for his escape before you arrived at the prison, after you insisted on taking him yourself. You need to find him soon if you want to keep your job, but more importantly, to stop him from killing again. Your password is Shackle

Onyx Glass: You are very skilled with a crystal ball. It's a long, difficult process, but eventually you can find anyone's location down to about a city block. You have helped on teams responsible for the capture of several high-level criminals, but this is your first case as lead aura locator. You successfully found Vladimir Rimidalv, but now that he's on the run, he's going to be difficult to find even for you.
You actually found Vladimir Rimidalv because of an anonymous tip from someone communicating through a mist call. When you used your magic to track the mist call, it was coming from Miguel De Mago's house. When you relayed the information, you left out the mist call tip, and took credit for locating him yourself. The Captain was so impressed that he assigned you as the lead aura locator on this case.

You were assigned to help detectives find the names on the list from Vladimir's pocket. You found every one on the list except for Jenifer Porter, the Briarwolf Principal Professor Prinetto was really difficult to find. For a minute, it looked like you could see him in two places at once. Your password is Gaze

Blee Oyardy: Even though you come from two very renowned bloodlines, you were born without any magical abilities. You were given a wand for your 11th birthday, and your Dad lit the candles with it. Ever since, you just carry it for show. Despite your lack of powers, you have acquired quite a reputation as a Potionmaster. You have always had a knack for following recipes and have applied that skill to potions. Since you lack the magical ability to do the final enchantment for each potion, you began selling prepackaged potions that, "for safety reasons," the buyer must cast the final enchantment to activate the potion. That business venture, Precise Potions, has grown into one of the largest wizarding businesses in America. You have been trying to appeal to the younger crowd and have reached out to the newly famous Blake Divine to sponsor future whisps (shareable thirty-second illusions). You are being blackmailed by an unknown person about your lack of powers and have recently hired a half-goblin detective named Borlook to find the blackmailer, with no success yet. You were coming back from buying barkberries at the store when authorities came to bring you here. You still have them with you. Barkberries are not a magical ingredient, but they do mask the smell and taste of your other ingredients, to keep your "original" potion recipes secret. Your password is Conjure

Professor Pat Prinetto: Professor Pat Prinetto is a renowned tactical spells teacher at Briarwolf. Before becoming a teacher, they were a lieutenant that fought in the Battle of Rocky Mountain. You are not Professor Prinetto. You are actually a half-goblin private detective named Borlook, and a good friend to the real Professor Prinetto, who has gone missing. As a half-goblin, look-alike potions last a lot longer on you. That and your keen half-goblin intellect have made you quite a successful undercover detective. You had a facial derecognition license, but it has recently expired. You could lose your Private Detective license if someone finds out. The potion you took to look like the professor will wear off in the morning. You have icetree bark extract in your pocket that you occasionally apply behind the ears to mask your goblin scent. You've subtly questioned a few of the school staff with a lie-detecting spell and found some burnt remnants of Dragonscale Insurance letterhead in the trash. Briarwolf's Principal, Jenifer Porter, seemed really worried about something. Other than that, you haven't covered much ground in your investigation before being summoned here. You knew Jenifer Porter during your time at Briarwolf, when you were among the first non-human students to attend. Jenifer advocated for the inclusion of non-humans with magical powers into the school and was very welcoming to you. Your password is Sleuth. Professor Prinetto's password is Soldier

Viclan Wahl: You own several businesses around town. You used to be known as Vic "The Brick" Wahl, one of the greatest Nine Broom players of all time. You graduated from Briarwolf with a full-ride scholarship to B.R.U. before being drafted to play for the Superstition Sirens. After a very successful career, you became the head coach for the Santa Rosa Jackalopes. You were in a practice with the Jackalopes when authorities came to bring you here.

Briarwolf's Principal, Jenifer Porter is a long-time friend and former teammate.
Recently she has been acting jumpy and secretive. About a month ago, you heard that Briarwolf was having financial problems, so you anonymously donated a very large sum.
You've also donated quite a bit to Wimbly Wikersham's campaigns over the years. You have a great deal of respect for him despite hearing outlandish allegations about him recently. You have recently reaggravated an old nine broom injury, so you have drumroot to apply as needed to temporarily sooth muscle and joint aches. Your password is Score

Taylor Slapdash: You live on a 40-acre ranch and take care of hundreds of magic creatures. In your free time, you compete in giraffalo riding and scromple wrangling tournaments. A couple weeks ago a man came trying to buy your whole herd of bellcanups, a fluffy creature with bright green wool that turns invisible when touched by humans. You turned down the offer, even after he raised the asking price a few times.

You currently have a pet fangtail in your pocket. These small lizard like creatures are illegal to own, because they can shoot acid from their tail up to 20 yards. This only happens if they get really excited or eat barkberries. He's under a calming spell, so as long as you keep him away from barkberries, he's totally safe. Your password is wrangle

Alex Basset: You are a bounty hunter that has been looking for Vladimir in order to collect the substantial amount of reward money offered for his capture. You have also been offered a much larger sum of money from an anonymous crow message to kill Vladimir before the police get a hold of him again. You burnt the note with a flame-casting spell, but it's a tempting offer. You currently have ghost-snail slime in a container in your pocket to treat an infection on your leg from coming in contact with poison shrub on a stakeout. Your password is Track.

Franky Fontana: You are an insurance agent for a lot of upper class wizards. You are actually a member of the Magus Mafia run by a man named Miguel De Mago. Being an insurance agent for Dragonscale Insurance is mostly a front. You have also been dating Ash, the oldest of Mr. De Mago's children, behind his back. Miguel De Mago is overprotective and has been trying to get Ash to focus on taking over the family business, so If he found out about your forbidden romance, you'd both be in deep trouble. You always try to take precautions with privacy spells though.

You were recently bit by someone's pet ogresnake on the shoulder when you were collecting money, so you have applied curdleaves to the wound, and have extras in your pocket. Your password is Goon.

Wimbly Wickersham: You are a career politician, currently a member of the Municipal Board of Prestidigitation (MBOP), who has recently been at the center of several scandals. Only your closest friends and family believe you that you have been set up. A ruthless mob boss named Miguel De Mago has been trying to pressure you into voting against a certain wizarding bill. You suspect that he is the one behind the recent allegations, as well as the many veiled threats you've received, but have no proof of either. Despite all this, this morning you voted your conscience and the bill was passed into law. Just before you were brought here, you found a vial of coaxing tonic that someone had placed in your pocket. You believe this was another attempt to discredit you. Coaxing tonic is illegal to have in any wizarding government building, because you can use it to easily convince people to take your side. Your password is Duty.

Blake Divine: You are a celebrity that became rich and famous almost overnight after one of your whisps (shareable thirty second illusions) caught the public eye. Many companies like Wands Upon a Time, Conjure Robes, and most recently Precise Potions have reached out to sponsor your whisps. You are actually 40 years older than you look, but have been illegally using an enchantment to make yourself look younger. You currently have duckmint, a youth rejuvenation herb, in your pocket just in case the enchantment starts to run out. A ruthless mob boss named Miguel De Mago somehow found out about your illegal enchantment and has been blackmailing you. You have been paying the blackmail, since if caught, you would likely face prison time. Even if you don't, you would most likely lose your fan base as you attribute much of the success of your whisps to your youthful face and iconic smile. Your password is Spotlight.

Phoenix Phangly: You are a forest ranger in the Purple Bramble Forest, who recently made the Wizarding news for saving five N.M.s (non-magic people) from a Sonoran Sand Dragon. You are also a Werewolf. You were bitten when you were eight years old. You try to keep it quiet due to the stigma associated with it. You have some jerky soaked in munkflower nectar in your pocket to use as an emergency sedative. You took a job as a forest ranger to stay away from people, even though rumors have been going around about a Werewolf in the area. Last night some kids on a dare spotted you, so you wiped the event from their memory.
A ruthless mob boss named Miguel De Mago came to you offering a large sum of money to bite and turn some of his henchmen into werewolves. You knew De Mago by reputation and refused. Your password is Howl.

Arbor Thorne: You are the horticulture teacher at Briarwolf. You were also a student at Briarwolf and a proud taranticore who led your spells mastery team to victory in your senior year. A few weeks ago, you went into the greenhouse after hours because you had left your teleportal behind. When you did, you caught a man trying to steal several rare magical plants. You called COPPS and described the man, leading to his arrest. You've been asked to testify at his trial. You overheard Jenifer Porter, Briarwolf's principal, in a heated argument with someone via a mist call in her office. You heard Jenifer say, "You can threaten me all you want, but I'm not going to be a part of that." You confided in Professor Prinetto, who offered to look into it, warning you not to tell anyone else. Most recently, however, the professor acted as if the conversation never happened. Your password is Mulch.

Scout Scrivener: You are an investigative journalist for The Daily Talisman. You have most recently been working undercover on an exposé. You believe that Dragonscale Insurance is a front for the Magus Mafia with ties going all the way to Miguel de Mago, though you don't have any actual proof at this time. When you were a student at Briarwolf, you won a Weyward Sisters Award for your article advocating for the inclusion of intelligent non-humans with magical powers into Briarwolf and other magic schools. Your password is Scoop.

Thank you for leaving the cauldron on for us. I'm Dakota Guster, and this is Benton Bloop from "Stirring the Pot", the best choice on the steaming network to get your news.

Whisps! If you're anything like us, you're obsessed with these shareable thirty-second illusions. Just say, "Whispering whisps" along with the magic phrase of your favorite whisp creator, and you'll be able to see anything from the latest griffin racing highlights, to a ramadillo doing the troll hop. Now I'm sure you already knew all that, but what you might not know is that whisp creation has actually become a great way to earn extra income.
Sponsors are just itching to jump on this new trend and get their products seen by millions of people. Join us later tonight, and we'll tell you which of your favorite whisp creators have already become millionaires.

Haha, now we're cookin', thanks for joining us on the steaming network, this is Thomas Dollyshot with Cauldron News. Vladimir Rimidalv is still at large. He has not been spotted yet, but police are offering a reward to anyone who can give info regarding his location.

In other news, Briarwolf's principal, Jenifer Porter, has gone missing. After not showing up to work this morning, her office was found broken into and ransacked. Police have no leads at this time.

Hi, welcome back to “Stirring the Pot” where we have all the latest gossip. It seems a week doesn’t go by without someone accusing this politician of something, but Wimbly Wickersham made headlines again for the most recent alleged scandal. An anonymous source says they have evidence that the Wickersham team has been pilfering campaign funds and using them to gamble.
Gambling, huh? What do you think, Benton? Is Wimbly a Tarot twelve-card or Duelling Wizards kind of person? Or maybe he’s more into scromple wrangling?

I don’t know, but I voted for the wizard. It’s weird that just a few years ago, everyone agreed Wimbly was an upstanding politician. And the campaign to finally allow citizenship to desert trolls and river harpies? That was huge. But now in the reelection campaign, everything's coming out. I hoped it was a smear campaign, but it seems like every day, something new crops up.
Well, speaking of people changing, there have been more sightings of a humanoid wolf-like beast in the purple bramble forest. Is there a werewolf taking residence there? Or do N.M.s just not know what a Navajo Yeitso looks like?

To be read by Detective Critterson: Please put in your password

Detective Critterson: You served in the same coven as Professor Prinetto in the battle of Rocky Mountain and became good friends.
Onyx Glass: You have a current location on Vladimir Rimidalv. It looks like he’s headed to this side of town. Through your crystal ball, you see a faint aura in the room. The kind of aura, goblins normally have, but not as strong.
Blee Oyardee: You still haven’t heard back from Blake Divine. This would be a great opportunity to see if you could sponsor some of their future whisps.
Professor Prinetto: You don’t recognize Franky Fontana, but the name rings a bell, and you can’t figure out why. You have met Blee Oyardy before, but they obviously wouldn’t recognize you currently. They hired you to find someone who was blackmailing them, but you were nearly caught snooping around and haven’t been able to get back on that case.
Viclan Wahl: Professor Prinetto was your tactical spells teacher when you attended school, and was one of your favorites.
Taylor Slapdash: Your fangtail is missing from your pocket. You must find it before Detective Critterson does. Hopefully, there are no barkberries around.
Franky Fontana: Professor Prinetto was abducted a few days ago and was supposed to have been killed by Vladimir Rimidalv this morning.
Wimbly Wikersham: Viclan Wahl is a famous nine broom player, who recently donated a large amount to your campaign.
Blake Divine: You knew Phoenix Phangly in high school. They kept to themselves and never went to sporting events, dances, or other after-school events.
Phoenix Phangly: You knew Blake Divine in high school. It’s surprising to see how little they aged.
Alex Basset: You have seen Franky Fontana before in pictures with Vladimir Rimidalv.

Arbor Thorne: You smell barkberries, a nonmagical fruit with a strong taste. You grew a barkberry bush in the school greenhouse once, but it attracted some fangtails who got in and stole the berries off of it. Their acid burned holes through one of the walls and several of the tables, making them dangerous and illegal to own.
Scout Scrivener: You have met Franky Fontana at Dragonscale Insurance, but you were wearing a disguise at the time, so he shouldn't recognize you.

Have you or a loved one been affected by pixie pox, the blue plague, dragon sneezes, or bouts of weightlessness? Have you been poisoned or given an unwanted love potion? Then Salutem Sileo could be right for you. Salutem Sileo works instantly with very few side effects. As with all premium spells, a small fee will apply upon casting. Side effects may include fantom toe syndrome, temporary speech to growl replacement, and ear steam. If you balloon more than twice your normal size, seek immediate help. Ask your witch doctor if Salutem Sileo is right for you. Salutem Sileo, Say the words. Renew your health.

Now, everyone knows that children can bring a pet crow, a tarantula, or a bat to Briarwolf, but starting this year, kids are able to bring peardragons. These cute little things have been taking the states by storm. They are cuddly, cause minimal scorch marks, and make great watch pets.

Nine Broom pamphlet:
Unlike most broom sports, nine broom is played indoors. On each end of the court is a three by three grid that makes up the goal. Players try to throw a plarker, an eight-inch round rubber ball, through one of the nine spaces.

If a ball hits a player without being caught, that player is out for the rest of the match, and the remaining players may need to guard multiple goals.

A match is won if goals are made in three spaces in a straight line, much like tic tac toe, or if all opposing players are eliminated.

As goals are made, opposing players may double up in the remaining spaces, if they have enough players, in order to make it harder to score, but they must stay on their side of the center line.

Duelling Wizards
You will need a normal deck of playing cards (with jokers removed), two decks if there are more than seven people.
A single pile is placed in the center of the table. There is no dealer.
The first player draws cards one at a time to his/her hand.
Cards can be place right to left or left to right, but changing the order of the cards is forbidden.
A player may stop drawing at any point.
Aces are worth one point. All numbered cards are worth their face value.

Wizard cards, Jack, Queen, and King are worth no points. If two wizard cards are drawn (A Wizard's duel), all cards in between the two wizards lose their value, and no more drawing is allowed.
If five cards are drawn without a wizard card in the hand (A Famine), all cards in that hand lose their value and no more drawing is allowed.
The goal is to have the hand with the most points at the table.

The hand is then placed face down in front of the player. The cards do not have to be spread out, but the order of the cards must stay the same.
Play continues counterclockwise until each player has drawn cards and placed them face down.

It is best not to give any hints about how good a hand you have, as it might help later players make decisions on when to stop drawing.

The player with the most points wins the round
In the event of a tie, the player with the fewest cards in his/her hand wins the round. If there is still a tie, each tied player wins the round.

Recipes:
Albino Bat wing soup
Lazagna
2 Cans of Tomato Soup
2 Cans of Cream of Chicken or Cream of Mushroom soup
2 cans of chicken, shredded
Pepperoni
Sun Dried tomatoes

Break Lazagna into large triangles and put into a boiling pot.
Add 1 ½ TSP black food dye to boiling water
Follow boiling directions on box.
Empty water
Add Tomato Soup, Cream of Chicken Soup, Shredded chicken, pepperoni and sun dried tomatoes.
Bring to a boil and simmer for 10 minutes.

Detective Critterson: You notice that a small amount of some type of acid has been spilled and is eating into the baseboard on a part of the wall.
Onyx Glass: Everyone's Aura is tinted green. That normally means someone has been poisoned. The color of green is worrisome. If a cure is not found in 45 minutes, everyone will most likely die. Start a timer.

Blee Oyardee: along with the smell of sandsteer jerky, you notice the distinct scent of munkflower nectar on Phoenix Phangly, an ingredient you use often in calming spells and sedatives.
Professor Prinetto: You've been trying to place it, but now you remember Franky Fontana's name coming up in the Blee Oyardee investigation as a person of interest.
Viclan Wahl: You had an Aunt that took munkflower nectar for her nerves, so you are familiar with the scent, when you smell it on Taylor Slapdash.
Taylor Slapdash: You have not been able to locate your fangtail, but you see her acid on one of the walls.
Alex Basset: You notice a rash on your arm. You saw an identical rash on a poison victim. It turned out to be dicetin powder, which is lethal within forty-five minutes of the rash appearing. You should start a timer.
Franky Fontana: Your fingertips are pulsing strongly. You've seen that before with people poisoned from dicetin powder. It works quickly. It normally gives the person a rash and then takes about 45 minutes to become lethal.
Wimbly Wikersham: Your fingertips are pulsing strongly.
Blake Divine: You have an itchy rash on the back of your arm.
Phoenix Phangly: You have a very good sense of smell, even in your human form. Right now, you smell a goblin in the room, even though you only see humans..

Hint if needed for when the timer has 15 minutes left: You seem to recall hearing something about health spells from a commercial you saw recently.

Protection Spell.

Blee Oyardee: Creates a potion from fangtail acid, werewolf blood, duckmint (normally used as a youth rejuvination herb), drumroot (normally used for muscle and joint aches), icetree bark extract (found in some colognes), Curd-leaf (normally used for tarantula and snakebites), ghost snail slime (used to treat rashes)
